Precious Hubby Boy: —

Have just received your wonderfully beautiful card, and your letter of Wednesday. Your card dear, is certainly the prettiest I have ever seen, and look, I think you very much for it. I do wish, boy, that I were with you, — I do so long for you, especially when it comes to such days. We would certainly be happy in the celebration of our birthdays. As yet, here, I have not received the package you sent me, — but do hope it comes to morrow. In your letter precious, you make no mention of the shirts I sent you last Friday. Surely you have received them by now, but, dear in case you haven't, let me know, as I hold the receipt in having it insured.

To-day is simply wonderful and do not know whether I can lay the cause of my happiness there or not. But, somehow, precious, I do feel so happy. It seems to-morrow, boy, what does that mean? It means everything in the world to me, it means you. Dear, the time is getting shorter, yet it is still so far away! This morning I filled out my leave of absence slip for a vacation, starting April 1st, and turned it into Mr. Stone. He must consult Dr. O'Hanlon about it, and now that the ball is started a rolling, I expect I sha

Soon know definitely what what. It is already rumored that I will soon be leaving to join you. Strange how people know all about your business as well, if not better, than you yourself. I have not told a soul yet that I intend leave no when.

Was up to see Ray last night. I don't know what I shall ever do with Helen when I come South. I don't want to start in to rave about her, as I shall never leave off. But there never was such a baby before! Never! I made Ray promise to have her picture taken soon. Ray sends her love and love to you and apologizes for not answering your letter. She will soon, however, — as that baby sure does keep her time well occupied.

Will run up to Morris to-day. For her birthday I nice shop at Bark & Tilford and get a nice box of big green grapes which I know she is fond of. I'll not make any mention of her birthday as I do ~~want~~ not want her to feel Pop's absence more than possible. You must have been happy after dreaming so pleasantly of Pop. Am happy love you mailed Mam a card.

You know precious, I am not keeping to my promises. I promised a short letter for to-day, didn't I? And after the tiny stuggy penny letter I got this afternoon, I don't know why I didn't keep to my promise, except perhaps because I love you so, so much.

How are your headaches, love? Take care of yourself, Love? How did business go this week? Hope to your entire satisfaction.

With all love, hugs & kisses
your loving wifie, Frances.

Dearest love, love, love, love, love you. You are most wonderful. Love you more than words can express. So I'll close now and write more again to-morrow. Thanks, precious for your kind, sweet gift.

Precious Love. Just now got your package. Love dear, you are a wonder. Am your gift is certainly wonderful. It is handsome. You sure have wonderful taste.
